Subject: Internet voting

Dear Secretary Williams:

I am opposed to any type of internet voting. It is not secure, and it is not verifiable as to who actually voted. The Federal government's personnel data base was hacked just last week which leads me to believe that the internet even less secure than I thought. Entire elections could easily be hacked if internet voting is broadened. County clerks should be instructed to obey the Colorado Statutes regarding any type of internet voting.

As a former election integrity activist, I am well versed in the lack of security with any type of electronic voting. The internet is certainly the worst.

Claudia Kuhns
