

Andrea Gyger

From: Cliff Andersen [REDACTED]
Sent: Monday, July 25, 2016 10:15 AM
To: SoS Rulemaking
Subject: Election Rules (8 CCR 1505-1).

Thank you for considering my input on the proposed changes to election rules. I am a grassroots activist and resident of Arvada in Jefferson County. I am no expert on election law. I am pretty good at forecasting and manipulating the politics of the electorate.

I can reliably predict that any changes to Election Rules this year that even hints at making things easier to cheat will have a dramatic effect on the electorate as well as those seeking any future political office.

Whether it fixes integrity or not matters not in today's (and tomorrow's) political optics. Today's headlines revealing political party cheating and the ongoing "extremely careless" moniker being liberally used this season will ensure political woe for anyone involved in rule changes making it easier to cheat.

Clifford Andersen
[REDACTED]

de Oppresso Liber

I know what you're thinking, punk. You're thinking, 'Did he use six superfluous adjectives or only five?' To tell the truth I forgot myself in all this excitement - but as I deal in English, the most powerful language in the world with subtle nuances that may blow your head clean off, you've got to ask yourself one question: 'Do I feel loquacious?' Well do you punk?