Hello:

I agree with Gina Borra's comments. I have also been a notary for many years and do not believe that it will be beneficial for notaries to be required to submit to a test prior to renewing their commission. I read the Rules often to make sure that I have an understanding of the current laws, and feel that this would cause an undue burden on notaries and a waste of resources for all involved.

Perhaps the notaries can be required to affirm that they have read the Rules prior to their commission being renewed.

Thank you,
Kelly Thompson
