ELECTIONS
CO SECRETARY OF STATE

Dear Ms. Griswold:

If Colorado is the "gold standard" of elections rules, then why was it necessary for Judicial Watch to sue Colorado for not purging Colorado voter rolls as prescribed by Federal Law because Colorado refused to do it as they are supposed to do it by law. There are some Colorado counties that have more voters registered to vote than the adult population in those counties. Now, how did that happen?

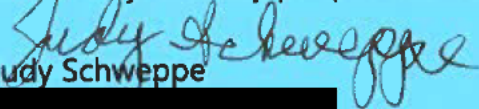

A number of other states have been sued also for not purging their voter logs for those who have moved or are deceased.

Recently, the state of Pennsylvania agreed to purge 21,000 dead voters from their registration rolls before the next general elections. The concession comes as the result of a lawsuit launched by the Public Interest Legal Foundation (PILF). The suit alleged Pennsylvania had failed to comply with its own "motor voter" laws that require the state to discard ballots from deceased voters.

Also, your comments about Georgia's new voting laws are quite disingenuous and cynical giving the standard "liberal quote" – "We will not be used as a tool to suppress the vote in Georgia." Actually, Georgia's law is less strict than some other states in our nation including Biden's home state of Delaware.

As you know or should know, the vote is not being suppressed in Georgia. Liberals keep repeating the same false mantra. Since when is requesting an ID to vote suppression. Almost everything in our society requires photo ID for numerous innocuous things. At least,  $\frac{3}{4}$  of our U.S. populace believes in voter ID.

This is why so many people have such distrust of our politicians!!!
